

Rotherham SENDIASS Impartiality Policy

Impartiality is key to the delivery and development of the SEND Information, Advice and Support Service (SENDIASS). The Special Educational Needs Code of Practice 0 to 25 states that "Information, Advice and Support Services should be impartial, confidential and accessible" The SEND Code of Practice 0 to 25 is a document that Local Authorities have a legal duty to have regard to. Impartiality is reinforced throughout the Quality Standards for Services providing Impartial Information, Advice and Support.

The Service views impartiality as not taking sides, not favouring one person or one point of view over another. Whilst providing a service to parents, carers and children (0-16), Rotherham SENDIASS has a range of service users including Parent Support Groups, voluntary organisations, schools, and practitioners within Education, Health and Social Care. The Impartiality Policy applies to all Service users.

NOTE: within Rotherham, young people (16-25) will be signposted to IYSS for Information, Advice and Support.

Relationship between SENDIASS and Rotherham Local Authority

The Service has its own delegated budget, has a dedicated web-site and has a clear service identity; its own logo, font and style. The Service has its own secure record keeping systems and ensures information provided by service users will not be passed on without their permission. The only exception to maintaining confidentiality is in regard to information which leads us to believe a person is at serious risk of harm.

The Service produces a range of information and also provides information from independent bodies such as the Advisory Centre for Education, Department for Education, and Independent Parental Special Educational Advice (IPSEA). Contact details of other local or national independent organizations are provided. Information is made available to both parents and practitioners. Service staff are keen for all parties involved in discussions to access factual information to inform the decision making process.

Rotherham SENDIASS is managed as an in-house but 'arms-length' service of RMBC. The Service is based in Riverside House. SENDIASS staff do not participate in the decision making process of the SEN procedures of the Authority and do not have a vested interest in the outcome of any discussions.

SENDIASS staff who are employed by Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council have job descriptions which state they must ensure advice, information and support provided to parents/carers/ children is impartial. Volunteers working within the Service have received clear information on Impartiality and have signed a document to say that they understand the importance of this. Training for Service staff is provided by RMBC and independent organisations.

SENDIASS staff contribute to local policy and practice.

Casework

The Impartiality Policy is given prominence in all Service Publicity. Service staff are aware of the implications of equal opportunities and endeavour to ensure the Service is as accessible as possible to all service users. Service staff will maintain the confidentiality equally of all Service users in line with the Confidentiality Policy.

When contacting the Service, service users are informed of the Impartiality Policy. Schools are reminded of the policy and, providing service users have given permission, when they are informed of SENDIASS involvement.

Service staff will support parents/children, individually or collectively, to convey their views to schools, the Local Authority and other agencies. Service staff will endeavour to provide factual information and not be drawn into expressing a personal opinion or making recommendations. They will help parents/children to make their views known or understood and will also try to ensure the parent/child is able to understand the views or comments of others who are working with them or their child.

Service staff seek to empower service users to make their own contribution to meetings. At times they need to pass on the views and wishes of the parent/child or to help them raise the issues they want to discuss. In doing so Service staff are representing the parent/child rather than their own perspective.

Service staff help parents/children put their views in writing for a range of documents. These are drafted out using information from the parent/child. Service staff will make suggestions regarding wording to improve clarity, accuracy or reduce potential conflict. Any documents produced are checked with the service user prior to being sent and represent the view of the parent/child not SENDIASS staff.

This practice should not be seen by any service users as indicating or implying agreement with the position or beliefs outlined. Service staff may constructively challenge service user's perceptions of events. They may also explain the importance of being aware of other perspectives.

Service staff will discuss the range of options open to parents/ carers/children, this may include appeals to the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal Service or schools complaints procedures. If parents wish to make an appeal to the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal, Service staff can help them with this, and may also signpost them to an independent organization such as the Independent Parental Special Education Advice (IPSEA) for support in preparing for and attending the hearing. Service staff will continue to support parents to work with schools and the Local Authority to resolve issues outside of the appeals process and offer advice and support regarding the local Disagreement Resolution Service.

Training and Supervision

Service staff and volunteers use training and supervision to monitor standards of impartiality and encourage reflective practice. All staff receive supervision on a quarterly basis as a minimum. Supervision will encourage reflective practice to encourage impartiality, address barriers to impartiality and challenge bias.

Monitoring the Policy

The Service has a Monitoring Group of parents and other service users who examine Service operation and arrangements for maintaining impartiality. The outcomes of Monitoring Group meetings are available on the Service website.

All new members of staff and volunteers working within the SENDIASS will be made aware of the Impartiality Policy via induction and training.

This policy will be monitored in consultation with the SENDIASS Monitoring Group. It will be reviewed at least every 3 years by the Monitoring Group.

The Service has a complaints policy which Service users can use if they believe the Service has not behaved impartially.

LA response

Rotherham Local Authority is aware of and respects the position of the Rotherham SENDIASS with regard to impartiality.
